John K. Tener has won his first tilt with Ban Johnson. There will be no joint meeting of the major leagues in Chicago, December 13, and the boss of the American League has come out for a schedule of 154

While there I ssmall likelihood of Ban Johnson's losing his grip on affairs in his own league, his overlordshp of baseball in general is a thing of the past. Ban fell down on the question of exemption for 288 major question of exemption for 288 major league players to "keep up the standard of the game."

In order to make up 288 players, Johnson had to include the National League, giving each of the sixteen clubs eighteen players for service in 1918. That was where he made his tremendous mistake, for Freeldent John K. Tener, who has swallowed some particularly masty comments on his ability within the past three years, was quick to take immediate advantage. ate advantage.

Tener Opposes Johnson.

"The National League will not even think of seeking exemption for its playwas what Tener said. "Furthermore. Mr. Johnson has no right to speak for the National League. He has all he can do to take care of his own league.
